INTRODUCTION

1.1 BACKGROUND

“Migration is an expression of the human aspiration for dignity, safety and a better future. It is part of the social fabric, part of our very make-up as a human family”

This quote of Ban Ki-Moon states the mere fact of people migrating to places. This carries us to the question: Do individuals move until they discover a spot to settle down where they really feel upbeat, or then again do our needs and needs change after some time, inciting us to in the long run leave a town we when considered home for another zone that will bring us fulfilment? Or on the other hand, do we over and over again move to another territory without knowing precisely what we're getting into, compelling us to retreat in fear at the principal indication of uneasiness?

To limit the odds of this incident, we ought to consistently do legitimate research when arranging our best course of action throughout everyday life. Consider the accompanying elements when picking another spot to live so you don't wind up burning through your important time and lucrative a move, you'll end up lamenting. Wellbeing is a top concern when moving to another territory. On the off chance that you don't have a sense of security in your own house, you're not going to have the option to appreciate living there.
